A multitude of lawsuits – some of them still pending – and many supporters of President Trump have alleged that Dominion voting machines failed in the November election, miscounting votes, flipping votes from President Trump to Joe Biden and much more.

The company has responded with threats to sue.

But now a state official in Georgia has confirmed a failure of the machines on Tuesday during the runoffs for two Senate seats.

"No 1, we've got another problem with Dominion machines. I know this is going to shock your viewers today but Dominion machines in several, get this, not one or two, but three of the largest Republican precincts at 10 a.m. are down. I got this from multiple people breaking live into my show. People have been told that they cannot scan their ballots. They come in vote fill it out. They're told they can't scan their ballot because the machines don't work," he said.

He said voters were being told to make out a ballot and leave it, and poll workers were promising to scan it later.

One voter argued he's being told to rely on Democrat "activists" to process his vote for Republicans Kelly Loeffler and David Perdue, the GOP incumbent senators defending their seats against Democratic challengers.

Just voted in #Georgia runoff & of course in heavily @GOP precinct at HeardsFerry—Sandy Springs #Dominion scanners "are down."

This means @TheDemocrats activist now will be in charge of scanning my vote for @sendavidperdue & @KLoeffler

Reports are coming out of the 12th Congressional District of Georgia that Dominion Machines are not working in certain Republican Strongholds for over an hour. Ballots are being left in lock boxes, hopefully they count them. Thank you Congressman @RickAllen!

The Daily Caller News Foundation has reported that John Poulos, founder and CEO of the Colorado-based Dominion Voting Systems, is planning to sue attorney Sidney Powell for her role in promoting "falsities" related to the 2020 presidential race.

Also being considered is litigation against Fox News, One America News Network, Newsmax and others.

He said things being said about him and his company are "demonstrably false."

Earlier, another Dominion official, Eric Coomer, sued over the allegedly "false conspiracy theories."

Dear WND Reader,

As America's political and culture wars rage, another battle is taking place in the news media.

Google, Facebook and the rest of Big Tech blatantly suppress Christian-conservative content while vacuuming up 90% of the advertising that once supported online news. It's a tough time for truth-oriented journalism.

WND, the nation's oldest independent news site and largest Christian website, is a rare combination of experienced professional journalists AND strong Judeo-Christian worldview. And we know most Americans—often portrayed as “ignorant hicks” and “bigots” living in flyover country—share our pro-American values and want real news, accurate information and insightful analysis on today's crucial issues.

That's what WND has delivered since 1997, all for free—no paywalls—an increasing rarity in the online news world.

Instead, we rely on the voluntary contributions of appreciative readers like you—now more than ever.
